1 Creditor Diatom, LLC ("Diatom") appeals an order approving 2 the motion of chapter 11<sup>2</sup> debtor Gentile Family Industries ("GFI") 3 to assume an unexpired nonresidential real property lease. We 4 AFFIRM.<sup>3</sup>

5 I. FACTUAL BACKGROUND AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

6 A. Events prior to GFI's bankruptcy

7 GFI's principal business is an open pit diatomaceous earth
8 mining operation on land leased from Diatom. Steven Gentile 9 ("Gentile") is the President of GFI. GFI pays royalties to Diatom 10 based upon the tonnage of diatomaceous earth mined. Virtually all 11 of GFI's business comes from the Diatom mining operation. Diatom 12 is comprised of three members – Mr. and Mrs. Cooper and their son 13 David Cooper.

14 Although GFI had been mining on the Diatom property since 15 2001, the parties did not have a written lease until 2006. On 16 January 12, 2006, GFI and Diatom executed a Land Use Agreement for 17 Mining Purposes (the "Cooper Lease"). The Cooper Lease had an 18 initial term through December 31, 2010, with the option for 19 additional five year terms:

20 Term. The initial term of the Agreement shall be from 21 the date of this Agreement to and including December 31, 22 2010 . . . . The Term shall be for five (5) years with 23 the option for additional five (5) year terms as long as all conditions of operation meet the "Owner's" approval and both "GFI" and "Owner" agrees [sic] to future use of 25 references are to the Bankruptcy Code, 11 U.S.C. §§ 101-1532, and 26 the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure, Rules 1001-9037.

27 <sup>3</sup> GFI filed a motion to supplement the record, which includes 28 several notices of cure payments in connection with its approved motion to assume. Because these exhibits have no bearing on our decision in this appeal, we DENY the motion.

1 the same surface areas as currently agreed upon, unless 2 sooner surrendered or otherwise terminated.

3 The Cooper Lease expired on December 31, 2010. Nothing was 4 expressly communicated between the parties about exercising the 5 option for another five-year term, but they proceeded with 6 business as usual for the next thirty months until GFI's 7 bankruptcy filing in July 2013. Gentile testified that at all 8 times subsequent to December 31, 2010, he believed the Cooper 9 Lease was in its second five-year term.

10 In or around 2012, GFI fell behind on its royalty payments to 11 Diatom. On July 13, 2013, Diatom served a 30-day notice to cure 12 over $140,000 in royalty arrearages and other various defaults
13 under the Cooper Lease (the "Default Notice"). The Default Notice
14 reminded GFI of its unfulfilled obligations for biannual increases 15 in the royalty rates according to the terms of the Cooper Lease, 16 noting that the lease was "now in its seventh (7) year of life[.]"

17 B. Postpetition events

18 1. GFI's motion to assume the Cooper Lease

19 In response to the Default Notice, GFI filed a chapter 11 20 bankruptcy case on July 29, 2013, and timely moved to assume the 21 Cooper Lease under § 365(b)(1) ("Motion to Assume"). GFI argued 22 the Cooper Lease was not expired and, thus, was assumable based on 23 the parties' conduct, Diatom's admission in the Default Notice 24 that the Cooper Lease was in its "seventh (7) year of life" and 25 because no written communication existed to suggest the Cooper
26 Lease was anything other than in its first renewal term. GFI 27 argued that if it was not allowed to assume the lease, it would be 28 forced to close its business and cease operations almost

1 immediately, leaving little or no recovery for unsecured
2 creditors. The Official Committee of Creditors Holding Unsecured
3 Claims joined in GFI's motion, contending it would help promote a 4 successful reorganization and was in the best interest of 5 creditors.

6 Diatom opposed the Motion to Assume on two grounds: (1) GFI 7 was improperly using the assumption process under § 365 to get a 8 declaratory ruling that the Cooper Lease's term was something 9 other than month-to-month;<sup>4</sup> and (2) the Cooper Lease was not in 10 the middle of a second five-year term as contended by GFI. Diatom 11 argued that under CAL. CIV. CODE § 1945, GFI became a month-to-month 12 tenant effective January 1, 2011, because it had not exercised the 13 option to extend the Cooper Lease by an additional five-year term.
14 Relying on the paragraph entitled "Notices," Diatom argued that 15 because GFI did not communicate a renewal in writing, the Cooper 16 Lease was not renewed in January 2011:

17 Notices. All notices and other communications to other 18 party shall be given in writing and shall be sufficiently 19 given if (i) delivered in person, (ii) sent by electronic 20 communication, with confirmation sent by registered or certified mail, return receipt requested, or (iii) sent by registered or certified mail, return receipt requested
. . . .

21 Diatom disputed GFI's assertion that the "seventh (7) year of 22 life" comment Mrs. Cooper made in the Default Notice evidenced the 23 parties' agreement the Cooper Lease was in a second five-year 24 term. Her description simply identified that it had been seven 25 years since the Cooper Lease was executed.

26
27 <sup>4</sup> Diatom's objection to the alleged deficient procedural 28 process was stated only in the "Introduction" section of its opposing brief and was not supported by any further argument or authority.

1 Diatom conceded California case law provides that a tenant's 2 continued possession of the premises may be a valid exercise of an 3 option to renew, citing ADV Corp. v. Wikman, 178 Cal.App.3d 61
4 (1986), but argued that ADV is distinguishable because the option 5 to renew there was not required to be in writing. Diatom also 6 argued that GFI, unlike the tenant in ADV, did not engage in any 7 conduct prior to the expiration of the original term to indicate 8 that it intended to extend the Cooper Lease for another five 9 years. Attached to Diatom's opposition was a declaration from 10 David Cooper and copies of cases and treatises Diatom argued 11 supported its position that the Cooper Lease was on a month-to-12 month basis.

13 In reply, GFI argued that the Cooper Lease was silent on the 14 mechanics by which the option to extend for additional five-year 15 terms could be effected and nowhere in the "Term" section, which 16 is the only place where the option is discussed, was there a 17 requirement that exercise of the option be in writing. GFI argued 18 that California and Ninth Circuit law was clear: when no writing 19 is required under the terms of the lease to interpret a renewal, 20 the conduct of the parties establishes it. Thus, GFI's continued 21 possession and the actions of the parties conclusively established 22 the option had been exercised to extend the Cooper Lease for a 23 second five-year term, which was in place for thirty months prior 24 to Diatom's issuance of Default Notice.

25 2. The bankruptcy court's ruling on the Motion to Assume

26 At the hearing on the Motion to Assume, counsel for Diatom 27 conceded the Cooper Lease was executory and could be assumed by 28 GFI. However, Diatom objected to GFI's ability to seek what was 1 essentially a declaratory ruling as to the term of the Cooper

2 Lease. Notwithstanding that objection, counsel proceeded to argue 3 the Cooper Lease was only on a month-to-month term due to GFI's 4 failure to communicate in writing that it was exercising the 5 option to extend the lease for another five-year term. The 6 bankruptcy court agreed that a debtor seeking to assume a lease 7 cannot change or amend the lease's term. Nonetheless, it 8 disagreed with counsel's contention that GFI had to provide 9 notice, either in writing or otherwise, to extend the Cooper 10 Lease. Counsel for Diatom conceded that the "Term" section was 11 silent as to whether notice had to be given in order to extend it.

12 After hearing further argument from Diatom that the Cooper 13 Lease was month-to-month, the bankruptcy court stated:

14 I disagree. I think that continued occupation, 15 continuing tendering of rent is probably enough to get 16 them around this argument you have, which just lapsed 17 into a month to month. Even your own client didn't treat 18 this as a month to month because they've gone ahead and 19 given two years after the fact a written notice, so even 20 they don't think it's a month to month. I don't think 21 that cuts much ice.

22 Hr'g Tr. (Nov. 6, 2013) 12:20-13:2.

23 The bankruptcy court entered an order approving the Motion to 24 Assume on November 14, 2013. In addition to the required findings 25 under § 365(b)(1), the court determined that the "Cooper Lease was 26 extended by the conduct of the parties into its first five (5)
27 year option term commencing as of December 30, 2010[.]" Diatom 28 timely appealed.

29 II. JURISDICTION

30 The bankruptcy court had jurisdiction under 28 U.S.C. § 1334 31 and § 157(b)(2)(A). We have jurisdiction under 28 U.S.C. § 158.

III. ISSUE

Did the bankruptcy court err when it determined in the context of the Motion to Assume the disputed issue of whether the Cooper Lease had been extended for another five years or whether its term was month-to-month?

IV. STANDARD OF REVIEW

Whether the bankruptcy court's procedures comport with due process is reviewed de novo. Price v. Lehtinen (In re Lehtinen), 564 F.3d 1052, 1058 (9th Cir. 2009); Garner v. Shier (In re Garner), 246 B.R. 617, 619 (9th Cir. BAP 2000).

V. DISCUSSION

The bankruptcy court's decision to determine the term of the Cooper Lease in a contested matter rather than requiring an adversary or some other proceeding was harmless error.

Diatom contends the bankruptcy court erred by deciding the issue of the Cooper Lease's term in the context of the Motion to Assume, which Diatom contends is a summary proceeding and limited in nature. Diatom argues the bankruptcy court exceeded the scope of its authority under § 365 when it decided this disputed contract issue, and it requests on appeal the "right to prove, through the appropriate legal procedure, that the lease term is month-to-month under clear California law." Diatom suggests the issue of the contract term would be best resolved in an unlawful detainer action or an action for declaratory relief. GFI argues that it was appropriate for the bankruptcy court to inquire into whether the Cooper Lease was unexpired as part of its ruling on the Motion to Assume.

Whether to assume or reject an executory contract or unexpired lease is left to the business judgment of the trustee or

1 debtor in possession. Official Creditors Comm. v. X10 Wireless 2 Tech., Inc. (In re X10 Wireless Tech., Inc.), 2005 WL 6960205, at 3 *3 (9th Cir. BAP Apr. 5, 2005) (citing Durkin v. Benedor Corp.
4 (In re G.I. Indus., Inc.), 204 F.3d 1276, 1282 (9th Cir. 2000)).
5 It is undisputed that only an executory contract or unexpired 6 lease of the debtor existing at the time of petition is capable of 7 being assumed; the issue whether the subject contract or lease has 8 terminated prepetition is determined under state law. Vanderpark
9 Props., Inc. v. Buchbinder (In re Windmill Farms, Inc.), 841 F.2d 10 1467, 1469 (9th Cir. 1987); In re Kong, 162 B.R. 86, 91 (Bankr.
11 E.D.N.Y. 1993) (if the contract or lease has expired by its own 12 terms or has been terminated prior to the petition date then 13 nothing exists for debtor to assume or reject); § 365(a). The 14 bankruptcy court clearly has the authority to determine this 15 threshold issue. See In re Windmill Farms, Inc., 841 F.2d at 16 1472; In re Kong, 162 B.R. at 91 (before a debtor can seek relief 17 under § 365(a), it must be established that an executory contract 18 or unexpired lease exists at the time of the filing) (citing 19 2 COLLIER ON BANKRUPTCY ¶ 365.02 (Lawrence P. King et al., eds. 15th 20 ed. 1992)).

21 The question of whether the Cooper Lease was "unexpired" was 22 not disputed. Diatom repeatedly conceded the Cooper Lease was 23 unexpired at the time GFI filed for bankruptcy and that it was 24 capable of being assumed. What Diatom disputes is whether the 25 bankruptcy court could determine the disputed lease term in the 26 context of the Motion to Assume.

27 Diatom relies on Orion Pictures Corp. v. Showtime Networks, 28 Inc. (In re Orion Pictures Corp.), 4 F.3d 1095, 1098 (2d Cir.

1 1993), to support its position that the bankruptcy court could not 2 decide this issue in the context of the Motion to Assume. In 3 Orion, the debtor entered into a prepetition contract with 4 Showtime. Showtime contended Orion breached the contract and 5 could not assume it. Orion moved to assume the contract under 6 § 365 and simultaneously filed an adversary proceeding against 7 Showtime claiming anticipatory breach. The bankruptcy court tried 8 the breach issue in connection with the assumption motion.
9 Determining that Orion had not breached, the court authorized the 10 assumption and dismissed the related adversary proceeding as moot.
11 The district court affirmed.

12 In reversing, the Second Circuit held § 365 did not authorize 13 bankruptcy courts to resolve questions involving the validity of 14 contracts in the context of assumption motions. "[I]t was error 15 for the bankruptcy court to decide a disputed factual issue 16 between the parties to a contract in the context of determining 17 whether the debtor or trustee should be permitted to assume that 18 contract." Id. at 1098. "At heart, a motion to assume should be 19 considered a summary proceeding, intended to efficiently review 20 the trustee's or debtor's decision to adhere to or reject a 21 particular contract in the course of the swift administration of 22 the bankruptcy estate. It is not the time or place for prolonged 23 discovery or a lengthy trial with disputed issues." Id. at 24 1098-99.

25 Although not cited by the parties, the Ninth Circuit adopted 26 the reasoning of Orion in In re G.I. Indus., Inc., 204 F.3d at 27 1282. There, a creditor had sued debtor for breach of contract in 28 state court prepetition. Shortly thereafter, debtor filed a

1 chapter 11 bankruptcy case and attempted to remove the action to 2 the bankruptcy court. After that failed, the trustee moved to 3 reject the parties' contract. The bankruptcy court agreed the 4 contract was burdensome; the rejection was within the sound 5 business judgment of the trustee. Based on the rejection, the 6 creditor filed a proof of claim for damages under § 365(g). The 7 trustee objected to the proof of claim. As a result, the 8 bankruptcy court held a five-day trial inquiring into the validity
9 of the contract. The court ultimately disallowed the creditor's 10 claim, finding that the contract was unenforceable due to a lack 11 of mutual intent between the parties and a lack of consideration.
12 The district court affirmed. Id. at 1279-80.

13 On appeal, the creditor contended the trustee's rejection of 14 the contract conclusively established a statutory breach of 15 contract that precluded the bankruptcy court from inquiring into 16 the validity of the underlying contract. Id. at 1280. The Ninth 17 Circuit disagreed, holding the bankruptcy court could properly 18 examine the validity of a rejected contract during the claims 19 process based on the plain language of § 502(b)(1). However, 20 relying on Orion, it went on to hold:

21 Based on the nature of a motion to reject and its 22 complementary proceedings, it is inappropriate for the 23 court to resolve questions involving the validity of a 24 contract at the time of rejection. As the Second Circuit 25 noted in Orion Pictures Corp. v. Showtime Networks, Inc.
26 (In re Orion Pictures Corp.), 4 F.3d 1095 (2d Cir. 1993), 27 "permitting a bankruptcy court to rule conclusively on a 28 decisive issue of breach of contract would render the use of 'business judgment' . . . unnecessary." Id. at 1099.
Orion correctly recognizes that adjudicating the validity of a contract at the time of rejection would turn a summary proceeding into a full trial on the merits, a result that would be inconsistent with the procedures found in the Bankruptcy Code. Instead, our approach gives effect to the plain language of the Bankruptcy Code

1 and allows a bankruptcy judge to postpone consideration
2 of the validity of a contract until a full adversary 3 proceeding can take place. This approach better conforms with the structure of the code.

4 Id. at 1282. In other words, the validity of a contract, if 5 disputed, cannot be determined in the context of a motion to 6 assume or reject. An adversary proceeding is required.

7 Whether a determination as to the "term" of an unexpired 8 lease is a determination on the "validity" of a contract for 9 purposes of § 365 is not clear. The Ninth Circuit has not defined 10 exactly what falls into the "validity" category. Certainly, 11 Diatom and GFI never questioned the Cooper Lease's "validity."
12 However, taking a broad view of G.I. Indus., Inc., it may be that 13 an adversary proceeding was required for the bankruptcy court to 14 determine the term of the Cooper Lease. We need not decide that 15 issue, however, because for all practical purposes an adversary 16 proceeding was held in this case.

17 Diatom characterized the relief GFI sought as to the Cooper 18 Lease's term as an action for declaratory relief. Generally, an 19 adversary proceeding is required for a declaratory judgment under 20 Rule 7001(9).

21 It is error to circumvent the requirement of an 22 adversary proceeding by using a 'contested matter' 23 motion under Rule 9014.<sup>5</sup> Such an error may 24 nevertheless be harmless when the record of the 25 procedurally incorrect 'contested matter' is developed to a sufficient degree that the record of an adversary proceeding likely would not have been materially different.

4 of the issues raised in a contested motion proceeding, extensive 5 hearings occurred, briefing was submitted and the parties were 6 given ample time to air their position; for all practical purposes 7 an adversary proceeding was held). See also Korneff v. Downey

19 Even if the bankruptcy court possibly erred in not requiring 20 an adversary proceeding to determine the Cooper Lease's term, we 21 conclude that such error was harmless. GFI was clear in its 22 Motion to Assume what relief it was seeking and on what basis; it 23 contended the Cooper Lease was in the middle of another five-year 24 term. Diatom had the opportunity to comprehensively brief the 25 issues and did so by filing its opposition, which included a 26 declaration from David Cooper and copies of cases supporting its 27 position that the term was month-to-month. Notably, while Diatom 28 objected to the bankruptcy court determining the disputed term

1 issue in the context of the Motion to Assume, it has never fully 2 briefed its objection until now. Plus, Diatom never requested a 3 continuance of the hearing on the Motion to Assume. The hearing 4 was held as scheduled; the parties had ample time to air their 5 positions. After considering the parties' evidence and arguments, 6 the bankruptcy court determined, as a matter of law, that the 7 Cooper Lease term had been extended another five years.

8       On this record, we have difficultly understanding how Diatom 9 was procedurally disadvantaged by the bankruptcy court's approach.
10 We fail to see, particularly since the material facts were few and 11 undisputed and the issue before the court was purely one of law, 12 how an adversary (or some other) proceeding would have produced a 13 materially different result. Diatom did not convince us otherwise 14 in its appeal brief or at oral argument. Absent a credible 15 argument or specific examples from Diatom showing it suffered some 16 procedural disadvantage as a result of the bankruptcy court's 17 procedure, the court allowing the matter to proceed as a contested 18 motion rather than an adversary proceeding is not a sufficient 19 reason to disturb the assumption order. Had the bankruptcy court 20 determined the lease term issue in Diatom's favor, this matter 21 would likely not be before us.

22       Accordingly, even if the bankruptcy court erred in not 23 requiring an adversary proceeding to determine the term of the 24 Cooper Lease, such error did not affect the substantial rights of 25 the parties, is not inconsistent with substantial justice and was 26 therefore harmless. In re Munoz, 287 B.R. at 551.<sup>6</sup> determination in the context of the Motion to Assume. Therefore, we do not address the merits of the bankruptcy court's decision.
